Surrendering your pet

Saving Strays helps hundreds of dogs, cats, rabbits, horses etc, in need find loving homes each year. We take in every animal surrendered to us regardless of its health, age, breed, or behaviour. Last year, more than 98 percent of the animals in our care were placed in new homes, or reunited with owners. We understand that parting ways with an animal can be especially difficult and we're committed to working with you to ensure the best possible solution for you and your pet.

Knowing where to turn

We know that sometimes people's circumstances change and they can no longer look after their pet. At Saving Strays we never judge anyone for making the responsible decision to give up their animal and we'll do what we can to help.

No matter how desperate you're feeling, please don't dump or abandon your pet, we can help. This is incredibly traumatic for them and also very dangerous – they could become seriously ill or they could escape and be hit by a car. It also means that even if they are found and brought to us, we won't know their history, which makes it a lot harder to find them the right home.

What happens to my pet once they're in the care of Saving Strays?

They will be carefully assessed by a vet and a volunteer of the Saving Strays team so we can give them any special care they need and match them to the right kind of home. After the assessment period they will go up for rehoming, providing there aren't any veterinary or behaviour issues that we need to address. Their profile will appear on the Saving Strays website and we will start our search to find them a loving home.

What if I can't keep my Saving Strays pet?

We never forget a Saving Strays pet and we'll always prioritise them and make room for them if your circumstances change.

I'm worried my pet will outlive me

Many people worry about what will happen if their pets outlive them. If you feel there's no one you can ask to take on your companion, our Pets into Care Scheme might be for you, have a look on our FAQ's.

Can I keep in touch with my pet?

Due to GDPR Data Compliance Guidelines, you can not have contact with the foster family or the new owner, however, you can have direct contact with us and we can provide you with updates on your surrendered pet. This contact can be through email or Facebook Messages on our page. We have a fantastic after care program to ensure we remain in contact with new owners supporting them with anything they may need.
